

The Department of Homeland Security is a part of the U.S. Government that deals with issues of national security. We have chosen three specific DHS Agents to textually analyze according to their biographies. These agents are: Agent Amanda Sanford - Field Agent, Agent Eric Borquist - Section Consultant Chief and Port of Entry Security, and Agent Paul Hummel - DHS Liaison Officer.

First, we will analyze Agent Amanda Sanford who was born in the small community of Whynot, North Carolina. She holds a Ph.D. in International Security from John Hopkins University, an M.A. in International Relations, and a B.A. in Political Science, all from prestigious institutions. Agent Sanford served as a Research Analyst for the FBI from 2008 to 2010, a Diplomatic Courier for the US Department of State from 2013-2014. There was also a time period which has been redacted from her file. From her various degrees, we can conclude that Agent Sanford is skilled in diplomacy and is likely skilled in public speaking. By the fact that she was trusted into a classified position, which we know she has due to the the redacted line in her file, we can infer that Agent Sanford is a trustworthy individual, at least when it comes to national security. Keeping a steady pace, we move into the next agent on our list.

Next, is an analysis of Agent Eric Borquist, who was born in the quiet village of Dry Prong, LA. Agent Borquist has obtained a B.S. in Mathematics along with a PhD in Engineering Physics, both of which were earned at Louisiana Tech in 2012 and 2016. Between the years of 2011-2013 Agent Borquist has provided his services to the DHS by contributing to the N.E.P.T.U.N.E Project, the S.E.E.T.H.E Prototypes, and the POWER/VIRES Operational Systems. A small portion of his file has been redacted. Along with this, he was an Army Ranger from 2001-2007. Based on the accomplishments he has achieved, Agent Borquist is a successful man who has contributed a lot to the scientific field, but seemingly has relationship/commitment issues as he has been married and divorced on three different occasions. Moving on, we will cover Agent Paul Hummel's psycho-analysis.

Finally, is an outline of agent Paul Hummel. Mr.Hummel was born in Rhein-Main Air Base, Germany. He earned a Ph.D. in, Computer Engineering, at Cornell University (2008) and as well as a B.S. degree, in Computer Engineering, at Carnegie Mellon (2002). He used to work as Team Lead Systems Security Engineer, National Security Agency (2010-2012), Senior Cyber Engineer II, Raytheon (2008-2010), USAF Special Operations, Enlisted May 2002 and discharged September 2002 after breaking his leg in a training exercise. He is currently a DHS Liaison Officer. Based off of his previous jobs and previous educations he is very cyber literate especially him being a Senior Cyber Engineer II. Based on the variety of jobs he has, we have concluded he is very smart man who values his work and education.

Overall, these are the psycho analyses of three similar but very different DHS Agents. All of these agents came from seemingly humble beginnings, eventually transitioning into the great agents they are today through their perseverance and dedication.
